

DEMOCRATS SPLIT INTO TWO CAMPS

MOVE TO FORESTALL VETO

FRIENDS OF RELIEF BILL PREPARING TO MAKE PASSAGE SURE

House Will Adjust Senate Bill With Own Program

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The two billion dollar unemployment relief program switched back to the house today, with progressives organizing to forestall any possibility of the measure being killed by presidential veto after adjournment of congress.

The $2,300,000,000 relief bill passed the senate late yesterday was to be formally received and rejected by the house at noon. Speaker Garner then was ready to appoint conferees for the work of adjusting the senate bill with his own $2,291,000,000 relief program adopted by the house on June 8.

Possibility of a veto lies in the fact that the bill in its final form is certain to include a federal bond issue for public works, a proposal which President Hoover has repeatedly and firmly opposed. The senate bill provides a $500,000,000 bond issue and under the Garner program the government would borrow $1,191,000,000.

If congress passed the bill in final form, cleaned up its other work and adjourned next week, Mr. Hoover conceivably might kill the relief program simply by declining to sign it—a "pocket veto." Rep. Laguardia, Rep. N. Y., insurgent leader, claimed, however, that he had sufficient votes lined up to prevent adjournment before the President acts on the bill. If Mr. Hoover then disapproved the measure, congress would be in a position to enact it over his veto.

Senate leaders hoped to obtain final approval of the $150,000,000 federal economy bill today, although controversies developed over two provisions. One of the disputed items provides that when dismissals are necessary, the first to be laid off shall be wives whose husbands also are employed by the government. Senator Reed, Rep. Pa., declared this would break up families, as the provision could be evaded if husband and wife did not live together.

As soon as the economy bill is acted upon, the senate is scheduled to take up the Hawes-Cutting bill under which the Philippine islands would be granted independence in nineteen years.

The Democratic unemployment relief program was adopted late yesterday by a vocal vote in which many Republicans joined. The bill provides:

$300,000,000 to be loaned to the states by the reconstruction corporation for direct relief of the destitute.

$1,500,000,000 expansion of the reconstruction corporation to create jobs on revenue-producing construction projects by states, cities and private corporations; $400,000,000 set aside to finance exports of surplus crops.

$500,000,000 federal bond issue for construction of highways, river, harbor and flood control projects, public buildings, and army and navy improvements already authorized by congress.

LODGER SOUGHT FOR SLAYING LANDLADY AFTER RENT DISPUTE

Friend Is Witness Of Attack But Unable To Stop Killer

CLEVELAND, O., June 24.—A 55-year-old boarder in the home of Mrs. Clara Compofredano, 33, was hunted by police today following her murder here.

Mrs. Compofredano, mother of three small children, was shot and fatally wounded as she sat by the flickering light of a candle in the kitchen of her home talking to John B. Testa, 50, a friend of the family.

Testa said a brief quarrel between Mrs. Compofredano and the boarder, Tony Colosanti, 55, in which she threatened to put him out of the house for non-payment of rent led to the killing.

Testa said she told him he was months back on his rent, that he seemed to always have money to buy wine and that she was going to put him out if he didn't pay. Testa said Colosanti appeared drunk and pulled a pistol and fired three times at her before Testa could reach him.

Testa said he caught Colosanti and struggled with him but was unable to hold him until police arrived.

The victim's husband, Michael Compofredano, returned home with two of his children, Jennie, 11, and John, 8, an hour after the killing. They had attended a meeting. A third child, Giuseppe, 5, was asleep. The husband is unemployed.

WOMAN DEAD, THREE HURT AT CROSSING

AKRON, O., June 24.—A freight train today plowed into a small sedan at the Portage Path crossing in Old Portage, killing a woman, injuring three other persons and bringing to the three the total overnight fatalities in this area.

Mrs. Steve Beres, 55, of Barberton was crushed to death in the accident. Her husband and two twelve-year-old girls were unhurt. Twelve-year-old girls were unhurt and Gerald Irby, 27, of Marion, Ind., were killed last night when the motorcycle and side car on which they rode struck a motor bus and was dashed to pieces against another car.

FORMER PALS READY FOR FINISHED BATTLE OVER PARTY CHOICE

Smith - Roosevelt Feud Splits Democrats At Chicago

CHICAGO, June 24.—Two former pals—Frank and Al—squared off today in a finish fight which threatens to shake the Democratic party to its foundations.

Supporters of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt pledged themselves to fight for abolition of the two-thirds rule and require only a simple majority to nominate the party's presidential candidate.

Roosevelt is conceded to have such a simple majority. Should he win the fight—for a change of rules—which in itself requires only a majority vote—he would presumably have a clear path to nomination unless some new factor appeared.

This decision to challenge the century-old two-thirds rule was reached during the night at a meeting of Roosevelt forces.

Just as the meeting began, Roosevelt was denounced as the weakest candidate in the field who could not win if nominated. This attack, one of the most sensational ever made in a party convention battle, was contained in a statement issued by Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, N. J., who is campaign manager for former Governor Alfred E. Smith.

It is understood the statement was scribbled before it was issued not only by Smith but by his close friend, John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee.

Friends of Roosevelt declare he is being made the target of a "Wall Street oligarchy." They are prepared to ring the charges on that tune as the fight progresses. This grave breach threw a feeling of anxiety and dismay over delegates who had hoped for a short harmonious convention next week which would send the party unitedly into a campaign in which its chances have been regarded as better than at any time since 1916.

Now the Democratic battle against President Hoover and the Republican party is destined to begin with ranks divided, with bitterness and dissension, chiefly arising out of the anger from a broken friendship between two of the most popular political figures ever produced by the state of New York.

The Roosevelt-Smith feud overshadowed everything else today.

For once Democrats appeared to be united on the anti-prohibition issue. They seemed set to go down the line against the 18th amendment.

The platform committee and the credentials committee were busy with preliminaries to the convention which opens Monday. Leaders in the victory campaign fund drive planned to meet to consider the condition of the party exchequer.

Over the whole scene was the spell of this newest party feud. Nobody can cite any very tangible reason for this bitter break between Roosevelt and Smith.

Today the Roosevelt forces, with victory almost, but not quite, with in their grasp, have set out on a fateful attempt to overthrow the historic two-thirds rule. They claim to have 691 votes. Under the two-thirds rule 770 votes would be necessary.

OHIO DELEGATES TO FIGHT ABROGATION OF TWO THIRDS RULE

Will Support Shouse For Convention Chairman

CHICAGO, Ill., June 24.—Ohio's Democratic convention delegation, standing by in preliminary strategies with three or more possible "dark horse" nominees for President if a Roosevelt-Smith dispute deadlocks the meeting, today indicated it would not vote for abrogation of the two-thirds rule in the move announced by supporters of Governor Roosevelt as an answer to their opponents.

Several members of the Ohio group were in conference at the time the Roosevelt supporters were meeting to advocate setting aside the two-thirds rule. The meetings came soon after Frank Hague, of New Jersey, manager for Governor Alfred E. Smith, declared Roosevelt's nomination would spell party defeat.

The Ohio delegation will be practically solidly for Joseph Shouse as convention chairman and against changing the two-thirds rule," said former Judge Maurice Bernon, of Cleveland, delegation member.

Persistent reports that New York's delegation might support Newton D. Baker were hailed as favoring an Ohio nominee, although James F. Curry, New York leader and member of Tammany Hall, had not confirmed the rumors.

Baker has maintained silence on possible candidacy. Attending last night's Ohio meeting were Henry G. Brunner, chairman of the Democratic state central committee; W. B. Conkwer, former Judge Bernon and Mrs. Bernon; S. Pyke, of Cleveland; W. A. Jullien, Cincinnati; and Miss Julia McCarty, secretary of the state central committee.

Because of their strategic position, Ohio's delegation will hold informal conferences during the next few days. A formal caucus will be held Monday when all the delegates are expected to be in Chicago.

The following organization was tentatively set forth: Senator Robert J. Bulkley, Cleveland, member of the convention resolutions committee; Brunner, state chairman; Mrs. Pyke, credentials committee; Frank T. Dore, Tiffin.

"The Ohio delegation is the trustees for the candidacies of George White, Newton D. Baker and James M. Cox," Brunner said. "To vote for abrogation of the two thirds rule would mean the abandoning of the whole agreement on which the delegation was elected before a shot was fired."

GERMANY EXPLAINS INABILITY TO CONTINUE REPARATIONS

LAUSANNE, Switzerland, June 24.—Germany explained France today why she cannot continue paying reparations, and received a sympathetic hearing.

Premier Edouard Herriot and Chancellor Franz Von Papen conducted the meeting, which was attended by more than twenty French and German ministers and experts.

Count Schwerin Von Krosigk, German finance minister, clearly implied Germany is unable to pay future reparations, even after expiration of the temporary moratorium.

DUCHESS UNABLE TO ATTEND BUT DANGER PRESENTED AT COURT

Former 'Adele Astaire's Mother - In - Law Reported Ill

LONDON, June 24.—Failure of the Duchess of Devonshire to present her dancer daughter-in-law, Lady Charles Cavendish, the former Adele Astaire, at last night's court at Buckingham palace was explained today when it became known that the duchess was confined to bed by acute rheumatism.

Friends of Lady Cavendish, famous as a dancer in American and Europe before her marriage to Lord Cavendish last month, indignantly denied insinuations that the duchess had purposely abstained from presenting her daughter-in-law to the king and queen.

The duchess personally coached Lady Cavendish in court courtesies and deportment and helped select her costume for the presentation.

"The suggestion that the duchess abstained from the presentation is just stupid," Mrs. Astaire, Lady Cavendish's mother, said.

"The duchess was compelled to return to her Chatsworth estate last week, bed ridden with acute rheumatism."

The duchess is also mistress of the robes and could not be absent from the court except for serious reasons. Lady Cavendish was presented by Mabel, Countess of Airlie.

NOT POPULAR

WINCHESTER, Va., June 24.—At least one Winchester resident does not like the new tax on bank checks.

He had $3 in his checking account, and wrote a check for that amount to a business firm. The bank sent the check back marked "insufficient funds," because the account was shy the two cents necessary to cover the new tax.

from the jail but said he fell from a boat while crossing to the West Virginia side of the river.

Millford Massie, 20, and Garland Massie, 24, also were charged with murder in connection with the Negro's death. Louis McKee, 16, said to be a member of the group, was to be arraigned in probate court today.

Murray was jailed June 7 after reportedly having threatened a white man with a knife during a quarrel.

CATTLE, HOG PRICES SOAR

Market Stimulated By Buying

COLUMBUS, O., June 24.—Cattle and hog prices soared during the past week, the markets for both having received a substantial buyer stimulus.

H. E. Curry, of the Ohio Farm Bureau research department, said cattle prices were now on the highest level since early in May. He reported that more fat steers have been sold at seven dollars per hundredweight and upward than at any time in the last three months.

Hog receipts, the farm bureau reported, "have been disappointing to buyers and higher prices have been paid under protest, although the price for fresh pork has not made a corresponding advance."

The demand for lambs was described as small. The market, it is said, did not show much strength. Live lambs were selling at prices out of line with the price of the dressed product.

COLUMBUS, O., June 24.—Geo. B. Chandler, secretary of the Ohio Chamber of Commerce and R. B. HAGUE'S ATTACK ON ROOSEVELT WRECKS HOPES FOR HARMONY

"Weakest Candidate" Declares Leader Of Smith Forces

CHICAGO, June 24.—Any hope for harmony at the Democratic convention was shattered today with an open declaration of war that split delegates into two hostile factions.

The statement that exploded the Democratic family was made by Frank Hague, floor leader for Gov. Smith, who labeled Roosevelt as the weakest candidate and one who could not hope to beat President Hoover if nominated.

The challenge was accepted by the Roosevelt forces in a meeting which pledged them to work for abolition of the rule for a two-thirds vote of the convention to nominate a candidate.

"We'll show you how strong we are," said the Roosevelt group, in effect, as their decision meant they must muster a majority to change the rule. If successful, they would practically assure their candidate's nomination.

The Hague declaration constituted one of the most scathing personal attacks ever made upon the eve of a national convention. It emphasized the depth of the Smith-Roosevelt feud and assured a convention bitterness comparable to that between the Wilson and Champ Clark forces at Baltimore in 1912 or Madison Smith and MacAdoo at Madison Square Garden in 1924.

An assertion that Roosevelt "has no chance of winning" and that he could not carry a single state east of the Mississippi was calculated to stir comment among the delegates. It injected doubt about Roosevelt among delegates, inject doubt about Roosevelt among the wavering delegations and solidify the opposition against him.

The Hague announcement was intended as a warning to the West and South that New England and the industrial East would refuse Roosevelt their votes. It even contained the inference that Eastern Democratic leaders would withhold their support of the New York governor.

"It is only fair as the leader of the party in New Jersey," Hague said, "to predict that if Roosevelt is nominated our state will be in the Republican column."

The statement pointedly listed every other candidate, including those considered to have only the remotest chance, as being preferable to Roosevelt. Its bid for a sympathetic, united Roosevelt front was apparent.

It was uncertain whether other candidates had joined the Smith forces in plotting the attack, but their participation was doubtful. James J. Farley, Roosevelt's manager, dismissed the offensive with this:

"Governor Roosevelt's friends have not come to Chicago to cry down, criticize or defame any Democrat from any part of the country. This, I believe, is sufficient answer to Mayor Hague's statement."

Rival candidates were cautious. Robt. B. Ennis of Baltimore, manager for Governor Ritchie, awaited his candidate's arrival in Chicago later today.

Governor Murray would not comment. The Garner spokesman wished to await word from the speaker in Washington. Senator Reed said he would not join in any concerted attack against any one candidate.

Frank Scofield, manager for Melvin A. Taylor, said he "quite agreed" with Hague.

FOUR PLEAD NOT GUILTY WHEN ARRAIGNED ON MURDER CHARGE

IRONTON, O., June 24.—Arraigned on first degree murder charges, four men had pleaded not guilty today to the killing of Luke Murray, 24, Atlanta, Ga., Negro, whose body was found in the Ohio River a few days after he had been taken from the South Point, O., jail.

FOOTLIGHTS OF OLD OPERA HOUSE TO GLOW AGAIN

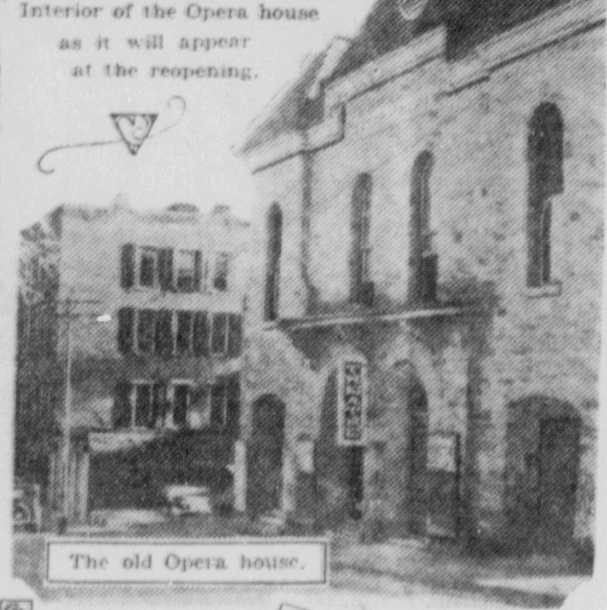

Lillian Gish

Street scene in early days.

The old Opera house.

By MAX HILL
Central Press Correspondent
CENTRAL CITY, Colo., June 24.—Footlights will glow again this summer on the stage of the famous Opera House here as the "Kingdom of Gilpin," boom mining camp of the seventies and eighties, recreates a theatrical era dead almost half a century.

Ghosts of a glamorous past stir in the steep and narrow streets as the old Opera House is reconditioned for the reopening on July 16 with the romantic drama, "Camille," as the play.

Charming Lillian Gish, supported by a distinguished company of actors, will play the leading role in this revival unique in the annals of the American theater. Margaret Carrington will assist in the direction.

Denver a Village
From a cluster of hand-hewn log cabins, Central City became almost overnight a teeming gold camp of 60,000 inhabitants. Denver was a village beside this mountain city. That was in the late seventies.

The Opera House was built in 1878, and some of the most famous stars of the age—Lotta Crabtree, Fanny Warde, Rose Coghlan, Maggie Mitchell, Mrs. Scott-Siddons, Edmund Booth and Joseph Jackson—appeared before the stage was darkened because of dwindling audiences.

Teller House, leading hostelry in the pioneer days, also is being reconditioned, prepared for an influx of guests unknown for many years. It was to the Teller that a pavement of solid silver ingots was laid from the street for President Grant to walk upon when he visited here.

The Little Kingdom bar of the Teller will be reopened to welcome guests at the play festival, but toasts will be different than those offered by the booted, bearded miners of the boom days.

In cleaning the bar-room it was necessary to remove wallpaper laden with dust and dirt of the years. Beneath several layers of papers were found murals of Greco-Roman goddesses, murals painted by a master artist. They have been restored to their original beauty.

A Brave Adventure
The opening of the Opera House on March 4, 1875, was one of the bravest adventures in culture ever undertaken in this nation. Kingdom of Gilpin was a rough, pioneer gold-mining region, its citizens hard-bitten miners seeking wealth from the earth.

In spite of the difficulty of inducing theatrical road companies to journey into the mountains, there was one period of nine months when the Opera House presented a performance by recognized artists at least once every ten days, sometimes oftener.

The 1932 festival is to be the first of an annual series, designed to preserve permanently for the American theater and for the west this remarkable monument to a people who in the midst of gold, sought to create a culture on which they had turned their backs to become pioneers.

Dig Up Old Chairs
First lighters at "Camille" will appear in costume, women in poke bonnets, long skirts, bustles and gay ribbons, men in stove-pipe hats and suits of fifty years ago. The old hickory chairs which seated the audiences in the eighties have been found and will be used as seats for the performances.

The festival is being underwritten by Edna James Chappell, whose grandfather was a partner of the late Senator H. A. W. Tabor, whose vast fortune had its beginning in this region. She is acting for Denver University and the Denver Art Museum.

With Miss Gish in the cast, will be Raymond Hackett, Cora Witherspoon, Moffat Johnson, Mary Morris, Helela Freeman, Ian Wolfe, Lewis Martin and Edna James Chappell.

In the audience will be descendants of the pioneers who wrested vast fortunes in metal from the mountains surrounding Central City.

A majority of the guests will come into the city via the "Cradle of Colorado," spur line of the Colorado and Southern Railway, in the tiny narrow-gauge cars used in the theater in ancient carriages and victorias, while some of the men will ride burros.

Robert Edmond Jones of New York City is staging the play, after which a grand ball in the manner of the early days will be held at the Teller.

Many of the famous fortunes of the nation had their beginning here. George Pullman, impressed by the double-decker bunks in the miners' quarters, is said to have constructed his first Pullman car with these bunks in mind. He laid the foundation of his fortune here, buying and selling gold dust and leasing money.

W. L. Douglass, the shoe manufacturer, was a cobbler here, while the late Senator Clark of Montana, afterward a copper king, and W. H. Stanley, the explorer, were local prospectors.

Attendance during the ninety-third annual Greene County Fair, August 25, is expected by J. Robert Bryson, fair board secretary, to be greatly stimulated by a twenty-five cent slash in the price of admission, decided upon recently in keeping with the present trend of lower prices.

Greater patronage anticipated by the fair board officials will, it is believed, offset in a large measure a decrease in gate receipts incurred by reduction of the admission price from fifty cents to twenty-five cents.

Children under 12 years of age, when accompanied by their parents, will be admitted free as in past years, and it is emphasized that a charge of twenty-five cents will continue to be made for automobiles entering the fairgrounds. Tickets admitting fair patrons to the grandstand and quarter stretch will also still cost twenty-five cents.

Secretary Bryson looks for a larger attendance and a greater number of entries in the various fair departments than ever before.

Now, however, he points out that lack of realization of its advantages is agriculture's chief trouble.

At that time he was admitting gloomily—not in speeches but in his less formal utterances in Washington—that he was blessed if he could see how agriculture was ever going to attain prosperity again, with the number of farmers then engaged in trying to make a living at it, and over-producing so alarmingly.

It looked to him, he said, as if a few big farmers, operating on mass production principles, could count on making real money; as if a comparatively small group could count on doing moderately well; but as if the rank and file could count on nothing but enough to eat, raised by themselves and their families. He surmised that that would not satisfy them, and, if so, what, he asked, were they going to do about it?—considering the redundancy of labor in urban industry also.

Still, he may be consistent, allowing for changed conditions—relatively. The farmer does have enough to eat, for a fact.

LOOK SHARP ON "DULL" DAYS!

Our Advertising Manager sends a little shopping-trip to Gentle Readers

You have noticed that on some days there is more advertising in your newspaper than on other days.

Friday, for instance, we carry many messages to help you with your over-Sunday shopping. Certain department stores have their favorite days for advertising certain merchandise.

But—here's the tip—on days when the paper seems "thin-ner," you sometimes discover the biggest bargains. It stands to reason that some advertisers prefer to run their announcements on days when the advertising columns are less crowded. And thus by looking sharp on the seemingly dull days you encounter surprises!

In fact, we don't think there's ever a time when one can draw an honest yawn and say "nothing in the paper today."

When it comes to ADVERTISING-NEWS, there's nothing in the paper that one can afford to miss!

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Commit thy works unto the Lord, and thy thoughts shall be established. — Proverbs, xvi, 3.

CUTS BOTH WAYS

At the opening of the Lausanne conference on reparations and war debts Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, chief spokesman for Great Britain and president of the conference, declared, "Engagements solemnly entered into cannot be set aside by unilateral repudiation." Outside of Soviet Russia that is sound doctrine in international, as well as private business.

The British Prime Minister's declaration cuts both ways. Germany, if Mr. MacDonald's dictum holds, cannot expect to escape from its engagements to make reparations, without agreement with the parties of the second part. A realization of that fact is apparent in Chancellor von Papen's recession from Chancellor Brüning's arbitrary declaration that Germany could not and would not resume reparations payments, whatever the Governments to which those payments are pledged might think or do about it.

At the same time, if Mr. MacDonald's dictum holds with respect to reparations it must also hold with respect to the engagements which Great Britain and the other Allies entered into with the United States, when they borrowed the money that laid the foundation of the present "war debts" to this Country. Those engagements were even more "solemn" than Germany's engagements to make reparations to the Governments which dictated the Treaty of Versailles; for they were entered into voluntarily and for a valuable consideration, whereas Germany's engagements were forced upon it.

The position in which Mr. MacDonald has placed Germany's creditors is this: If they even hint at repudiation of their debts to the United States, Germany is by the same token free to repudiate its reparations obligations to them. The probability of unilateral repudiation of either reparations or war debts does not, at this time, appear to be strong.

JAPAN'S SILK

The Japanese Government has just cancelled its contract to sell 98,310 bales of raw silk to the agents of a New York firm. The silk will be taken entirely off the market and woven for the army and navy and other public departments, where it will not come into competition with future crops.

Silk is Japan's chief article of export. The total value of the raw silk, silk textiles and waste silk shipped out of that country in 1929 was roughly $265,000,000. Attempting to bolster the price of an article upon which a large percentage of its population depends for a livelihood, Japan has spent about $37,000,000 in the last two years in the form of indemnities to bankers for loans made on the security of silk. As a result it finds its hands full of "stabilization" silk, which producers want definitely removed from the market.

Silk-clad soldiers hiking across Manchuria would symbolize an economic fallacy by no means confined to the Land of the Rising Sun. The Federal Farm Board in this Country is loaded down with "stabilization" wheat, which it is disposing of to the needy in order to clear the track for future crops. They are still burning coffee in Brazil in an effort to bolster the price of that energizing beverage. Government efforts to stabilize commodity prices in a falling market have proved costly and futile the world over.

WASHINGTON: SYMBOL OF PATRIOTISM

By H. W. CHASE.

President, University of Illinois.

Washington has come to stand for us primarily as a symbol of patriotism. What does it mean to be a patriot in the year nineteen hundred thirty-two? It certainly does not mean to do and to think in detail what Washington did and thought. One expression of his patriotism was a war with England. To us of today such a conflict would be one of the most fearful calamities that could befall civilized mankind. Another expression of his patriotism was that he led a revolution to overthrow the organized government under which he had grown up and which he had served. But is there any thoughtful American citizen today who feels that a man who advocates the overthrow of our own form of government is a patriot? Rather do we regard him as far from patriotism as one pole is from the other. Washington's patriotism, in an eighteenth century world, cautioned his countrymen against European entanglements. That oft-quoted warning was not given to a twentieth-century audience. Our attitude toward Europe ought to be determined by the problems of our own generation, as of course, it fundamentally is. If there is something of disillusionment and withdrawal about our attitude toward Europe today, it is, and ought to be, because of the experiences of our own generation.

Washington's patriotism found expression in the government of a republic which was frankly aristocratic. We sometimes forget the profound change which has taken place in the character of our institutions since the day of Washington. The rule in which he and those about him believed was popular only in a restricted sense, with limited suffrage, and with the clear enough understanding with the land-owning merchant, the banker, and the professional man. They believed in an aristocratic republic. It was not until that great popular uprising that seated Andrew Jackson in the presidency that our evolution toward a Democratic republic really got well under way. Our patriotism must work with different elements from Washington's. He knew nothing of melting pots, was familiar with only one aspect of one race problem, had never heard of an industrial slum and had only the vaguest notions of a real system of public education, had never heard of organized crime gangs—and would have been utterly shocked at universal suffrage.

To be patriotic it is not necessary that we should do and believe in detail what Washington did and believed a century and a half ago. The challenge that comes to us is rather that we should cherish, that we should work for, our America as he cherished his. Here is our country; here are its problems. It is for us to work with these problems in the spirit in which he worked with his—in a spirit of loyalty to the institutions we have evolved through the epic of our history, in a spirit of intelligent good will toward what lies about ourselves. To do the just thing, the right thing, the fair thing, in a spirit of devotion to a cause that is bigger than any individual, in a spirit of loyalty to the ideal America that is a vision that must not fall amid all imperfection and confusion—that is the challenge to our generation, as it is that of generations past and to come.

MY NEW YORK

By JAMES ASWELL.

PARIS.—There are moments when the visitor from Broadway feels with a rush the distance separating him from home—a stretch not only of watery miles, but of fundamental institutions.

For example, I was talking to a French-American banker the other day who has come over to help move his aged parents into a new apartment. "You got tired of an apartment after five or six years," I suggested. "It isn't like a real home."

He looked at me with an amused twinkle in his eyes. "My family has lived in this one for 83 years," he said.

PARISIEN MONTE CARLO I had a taste of Monte Carlo in Paris the other evening, at the Frolies, one of the most ornate of the local gambling clubs. Paul Farrell, who probably knows more about Paris than any other American, escorted me.

Gambling is not for me. It is a vice which to me has always seemed understandable in the male once in a fortnight with friends, but totally incredible as a nightly diversion. I never play games for stakes myself, but the Frolies is a curious and absorbing part of the Parisian dark-to-dawn world.

There was difficulty getting in, although the place is perfectly legal and pays its taxes regularly to the state. Shrewd French legislators have ordained that no man can join a gambling club on the spur of the moment. One waits four days for a membership card, after being introduced by friends and furnishing a small autobiography to the guardians of the portals.

The assumption is that if a man wants to gamble badly enough to go through all that red tape, he is beyond help and the only solution is to let him go ahead. Incidentally, no woman is admitted to any Paris gaming club, and to none within a radius of 250 kilometers of the city.

ROOM FOR CHANGE

The two games played at the Frolies are baccarat and Chemin de fer. Both are card games. Roulette, a monopoly of the French protectorate of Monaco (Monte Carlo) is forbidden.

The main salon reminds me of nothing so much as a hall in a Louis XIV palace. It is below two curving staircases, is overhung by ornate balustrades decorated with faded paper roses and huge crystal chandeliers. One expects to meet there gentlemen in powdered wigs and lace handkerchiefs tucked in ruffled sleeves.

Instead the atmosphere of the salon de chance is businesslike to the point of being grim. Scarcely a stir of chatter breaks a pall-like silent silence. Few are in evening attire. They are here, not for diversion, but to win.

PERENNIAL

At the same chair at the same table for 10 years, all night long, has sat an Egyptian in his eighties, wearing a flowing beard and neat top hat. He is a professional. The legend is that he once made a bet with a friend, staking a life of gambling—and lost.

A conjecture probably nearer the truth is that he loves the game. His bets are never large, although the attendants see to it that he gets the chair he wants. Anyone will tell you that years ago a million francs was nothing for him to hazard on the turn of a card.

Now he is said to win, steadily, consistently, about 50 francs, or $2 a day. When he has his winnings he sits back to watch. He is not out of the club more than five hours out of 24.

Here ladies and gentlemen, is Monte Carlo without frills—gambling in its stark simplicity of pose. To win. To gain. Something for nothing. There is no foolishness about gambling here. There are no purple legends.

CORNERED AT LAST

Naming Of Everett Sanders To Pilot Republican Party Well Received At Capital

WASHINGTON.—Everett Sanders has a right to feel flattered. From politicians in Washington, news of his nomination by President Hoover as the Hoover campaign chairman elicited the almost invariable comment:

"Well, Everett is a good selection."

Most of the political folk spoke in a tone of some surprise and with an emphasis upon "Everett," implying a widespread feeling that not all of Mr. Hoover's selections have been particularly brilliant.

There is no doubt that Everett Sanders is popular. Democrats, as well as Republicans, wets and dries, even radicals evidently think well of him.

He will be recalled as the Terre Haute, (Ind.) congressman whom President Coolidge drafted from Capitol Hill to be his private secretary when C. Bascom Simpson retired.

President Hoover's entire secretarial staff has to hustle to make a botch job of duties that Sanders used to handle all by himself to perfection without undue exertion. The Hoosier is a high-class diplomat. He understands human nature, knows the country and he's had experience. He is likable at first sight—adaptable, amiable and as keen as mustard.

He was sergeant-at-arms at the recent G. O. P. convention. One can't help wondering whether ex-President Coolidge didn't recommend him for his new post. Since 1928 he has been practicing law in Washington.

Congress received word of President Hoover's re-nomination without a ripple of excitement, but the senate gave Vice President Curtis a round of applause, in which the Democrats politely joined, when Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, announced his victory at the Chicago gathering.

Nevertheless, regardless of party lines, it unmistakably is the lawmakers' judgment that the Republican ticket could have been strengthened by the choice of any one of several rival candidates mentioned for the vice presidential nomination, provided it had been possible to effect the substitution.

ALL of US By MARSHALL MASLIN

Just People

Tom and Dick and Jane and Ellen

All Alike?

When Tom has troubles nobody would know it. He covers up, smiles, keeps his agonies to himself.

When Dick has troubles everybody knows it. He tells the entire world and feeds his pain on other people's sympathy.

Jane never married. She sneers at marriage. She is sour, she is eccentric.

Ellen never married. She wanted to be married but nobody asked her. She is gentle. She is kind. She is unselfish.

Eleanor is married and has three children. They are the center of her life. The children come first, before her husband, before everything in the world. The older they become, the less happiness she seems to have in them.

Frances is married and has four children. She keeps them clean, happy, well-mannered, and everybody admits she is a "good mother."

But SHE frankly admits that her husband is more important than any of her children, though she loves them deeply. Her entire family is happy.

Pete is always wondering what people are thinking about him. He is easily hurt and shows his pain. His friends feel the strain when they are with him.

Frank never seems to think about himself at all. He must, of course, but you'd never know it. It's easy, being with him.

Jack, only eight years old, is a happy child. He doesn't whine. He laughs far more than he cries. He is busy all the time. And doesn't lie.

His brother Jim, two years older, carries a chip on his shoulder. He keeps to himself and resents instruction. He is vain and timid and lies quickly though clumsily.

Dan loves power more than anything else in the world and will sacrifice anybody and all other happiness to achieve it.

Bill never thinks in terms of power. There's little calculation in him and no desire to use other people for his own ends.

Ed has intelligence, but uses little of it. Charlie has just enough intelligence and uses all of it.

Ellen wants excitement. Cecilia wants peace.

Harry is a "ladies' man"; men don't like him. Phil is a "man's man"; the women like him.

And yet, you are frequently hearing people say that human beings are all alike. . . . There may not be much difference between us, but the differences are astonishingly important.

Swimming And Its Dangers

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Swimming is such a splendid form of exercise and perfectly adapted to summer that the increase in swimming pools in all communities is to be welcomed.

Is there any danger from the use of swimming pools? And if so, what should be done to make them safe?

The dangers are very real. It is impossible for a swimmer to prevent secretions from the nose and mouth from being mixed with the water. These are frequently harmless but may be highly infectious. Every year a number of infections—sinus infections and throat infections, going on to middle ear disease and mastoid disease, especially in children, are ascribed to swimming pools. Undoubtedly some of these are merely coincidences. Undoubtedly also some of them are due to the mechanical effects of swimming—the water getting in the nose and mouth makes a raw surface, removes the natural secretions and chemistry of those orifices and invites infection.

So far as the ear is concerned, water pressure from swimming under water and diving may make congestive changes or even possibly rupture the ear drums.

But when all these causes are given due weight, there remains the possibility of unlimited cross infection in pools.

"Caring for a pool is a trade in itself," writes Orson D. Munn, in the Scientific American, "one requiring attendants who are capable of taking pains and actually interested in doing so. The commodity known as intelligence is also required. Unremitting diligence is demanded. Not every workman is capable of caring for a pool. In the case of municipal pools local politics may prove as deadly a menace as the well known Bacillus coli."

The frequent changing of the water in a pool is not sufficient to make it free from danger. Chemical sterilization of swimming pools is best carried out with chlorine gas, one part to a million.

Water thus treated is not dangerous or irritating to any part of the body—skin, eyes, nose or mouth.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS

J. H. T.: "What causes the cuticle around the nails to peel continuously?"

Answer: Probably the commonest cause is ringworm infection, similar to "athlete's foot." Pus infection will also cause it, and it is frequently impossible to determine the cause exactly, the last group of cases usually being named "eczema."

Be Kind And Appreciative

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE.

What is there about the in-law relationship that breeds friction? I think sometimes that if two people who dislike one another as in-laws could meet without any ties of relationship they would like one another immensely, or, at least, get along amicably.

The in-law relationship seems to engender especial bitterness. In answer to a letter from Mrs. C. who, with her husband, was living with her parents-in-law, one of our readers sent the following letter.

"Dear Virginia Lee: In reply to Mrs. C's letter, let me tell you my story. Oh, how thankful Mrs. C. should be that her mother-in-law treats her nicely! My mother-in-law hated (no other word fits) her daughters-in-law. The other daughter-in-law had an unusually large family. Her mother-in-law piled her son because he had raised them, but never patted the mother of 14 children.

"When I came into the family I entered upon 39 years of Hades. Oh, how she hated me. She turned the whole relationship against me with her malicious tongue, even the pastor of the church. You see she was a great churchgoer.

"I am an old woman now, but I spent a dreadfully unhappy life. Soon after my marriage my husband became an invalid and I had an invalid husband for 39 years, and even after his death his relatives made trouble, so I went far away. My husband was cheated out of his inheritance from his father's estate, and yet when the time came that his mother was penniless, my husband and I had to care for her.

Exercise In Water Good

By GLADYS GLAD.

There's a well-known swimming champion now training for the coming Olympics who possesses one of the loveliest figures I've ever seen.

She takes her swimming seriously, this lass, and practices frequently. Yet, in spite of—or I should say, because of—this, her figure is of such perfection that it could easily put a good many beautiful nudes out of joint.

The girl who has the opportunity to do any swimming during these summer months, and desiring to take advantage of it certainly proves herself a dummy of the first water. For swimming is one of the grandest forms of exercise for women going. It beautifies the lines of the figure, develops symmetry and makes the body fleet and graceful.

There are usually but two reasons why some women pass up swimming as a form of exercise. The first is that they fear the water and consequently have never learned to swim. The second is, they fear that swimming will develop their muscles to such an extent that they will appear heavy and clumsy.

Neither of these reasons is really a good one. Of course, if you are afraid of the water, you've got to overcome that fear before you can learn to swim well. But the following simple procedure is said to be sufficient to alleviate all such fear:

Stand in water up to your chest. Then take a deep breath, submerge your head with your eyes open, and exhale. Repeat this a number of times until you gradually lose your fear. After you are no longer afraid, it shouldn't take you long to learn to swim. Skill will come with practice, you know.

As for swimming over-developing certain muscles—that, if you'll pardon the expression, is simply the bunk. Swimming does not develop bulging muscles in one place and leave another undersized. That occurs only when one portion of the body is overworked to the neglect of the other parts. Swimming could not do this, as it is one of the most balanced forms of exercise. It involves practically every muscle in the body and therefore tends to give perfect symmetry to the figure. So if you have the opportunity, swim, sisters, swim.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Warts

Helena: Warts are caused by skin infection. It is dangerous to try to remove them yourself. Consult a competent skin specialist about them.

Complexion

Margie: I regret to say that the space allotted to me here is too limited to permit my printing my method of eradicating under-eye wrinkles, crow's feet, pimples, blackheads, etc. However, the full information is contained in detail in my "Beauty Culture" booklet.

Nails

Doris: You'll have to wait for those white spots to grow out. Usually, they result from bruises. Try not to knock your nails against hard objects, and never use a hard implement to push back your cuticle.

Eyelashes

Mrs. J. H.: Daily brushing of the lashes with a small eyebrow brush will in time train them. Use a bit of vasoline or castor oil on the brush when doing the brushing to give the lashes gloss and promote their growth.

Editor's Note: While it is impossible for Miss Glad to answer beauty questions by mail, she will be happy to send you her pamphlets on "The New Figure" and "Beauty Culture" if you will write her, care of this paper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and ten cents in coin for each, to cover cost of printing and handling. For her articles on "Care of the Hands and Nails" and "Care of the Feet and Legs," two cents in coin for each, and a self-addressed, stamped envelope are required. SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED
by Phil

Even the moral influence of a dignified rooster, brought along to the contest to act as a mascot, availed the Xenia Chick Hatchery softball team not much against Anderson's Abattoirs Wednesday night.

The rooster, attached to a length of twine, flayed the proceedings with a somewhat bored and listless expression on his features, and frequently paid not the slightest attention to the game even when the Hatchery team was batting.

Not once did the mascot betray a trace of excitement, possibly because there was little to enthuse over the Hatchery batting.

Some suspicion exists that the Abattoirs may have smuggled in a goose, which theory is supported by the fact the Hatchery team was presented with nine goose eggs by Anderson's.

It was perhaps just as well that the Hatchery lost the game. Otherwise Anderson's would have been in a position to lodge a protest with the Softball Commission on the grounds they had lost on a fowl.

An after thought on the subject of fowls of another kind, is that the fistic affairs of Max Schmeling and Jack Sharkey are now balanced. Two years ago the German won the world's heavyweight title from Sharkey on a foul (low blow). The other night it was the Boston sailor's turn to win the championship from Herr Maxie, also on a foul decision.

Present indications are that it may be a long time before Company L, National Guard softball team will be able to play another American League contest.

Ordering of a detachment of the Xenia company to the Athens County mine strike area this Saturday means that a scheduled contest with Central High next Tuesday will be cancelled.

It is uncertain when the militia team will play its next league game. All depends upon the length of stay of the local troops in the mine region.

It is possible the company may not also get to play one or both of two synthetic double-headers manufactured for July 12 and July 19, shortly before the Xenia guard unit is scheduled to go to Camp Perry, O., for the annual two-weeks summer training period.

Steve Phillips, Xenia starter, after winding up an engagement at a night Short Ship circuit meeting in Mansfield, O., is acting in a similar capacity at Ellyria, O., this week.

EX-HIGHS VICTORS OVER OSBORN TEAM

In what the two teams were pleased to call a softball contest, Manager O. C. Custer's Ex-High team of the American League outlasted Emanuel Good's Osborn Yankees to snatch an 18 to 16 verdict on the Osborn diamond Thursday night.

Twenty-one hits, including home runs by Spahr, Price and Shaffer, two three-baggers by Glass and six doubles, three of them by Fletcher, and one each by Huston, Price and Karch, rattled off the Ex-High bats. There were also ten ordinary singles, hardly worth mentioning. The heavy blasting was not all one-sided, however, three Yankee batters knocking home runs, Lewis, Siefer and M. Sharp hit for the circuit.

The Osborn team grouped five hits with two errors to score six runs in the second inning, but this proved only a drop in the bucket when the Ex-Highs retaliated with nine hits and as many runs in the third.

Good's Osborn team seeks a return contest with the Ex-Highs to be played in Xenia at a later date.

MERCHANTS TO PLAY DAYTON OWLS AGAIN

Xenia Merchants baseball club will open a three-game series Sunday afternoon on the Washington Park diamond with the Dayton Owls, a team the Merchants experienced the greatest difficulty defeating, 4 to 3 in ten innings last Sunday.

Preliminary to the series opener, a softball contest will be staged between two teams representing the rival baseball nines.

The Xenia softball aggregation will include the following players: Zell, Lane, Cline, Blake, Fuller, Jones, Kafory, Wones, Herr, Peters, Houk and Clark.

Babe Ruth made a home run and a single, accounting for two tallies, in four times up.

Lou Gehrig walked and made a home run, accounting for two tallies, in two tries.

Al Simmons singled in five times at bat.

Billy Terry made two singles, accounting for two runs, in three trips to the plate.

Hack Wilson doubled, accounting for three runs, in four times up.

LUTTRELL PUZZLES CADETS BUT HOMER PREVENTS SHUTOUT

Mates Make Most Of Safeties Off Two
Home Hurlers

Utilizing a nice change of pace that kept the opposition guessing—and guessing badly most of the time—Eddie Luttrell pitched Central High School's softball team to an easy 9 to 1 victory over the league-leading O. S. and S. O. Home Cadets in an American League contest at Cox Field Thursday night.

The defeat was only the second encountered by the cadets this season, but Central High, occupying second place in the league, now trails the leaders by only one full game.

Pitcher Luttrell fed the cadet batters a mixture of slow and fast balls, struck out seven and allowed but six hits to this cadet team, which has a reputation for slugging the apple.

Eddie made only one mistake and it deprived him of a shutout triumph. He tossed up a slow ball that Blair, cadet third baseman, found to his particular liking in the fifth inning. With the bases empty, Blair slammed a home run to deep left field for the only cadet run of the contest.

The cadet team was minus the services of its youthful star pitcher Bobby Jones, who is enjoying a vacation, but it is doubtful if the Home would have won with Bobby Swindler, military instructor at the institution, to do the pitching, and Perry was unequal to the task.

After yielding two runs in the first inning and four more in the third, Lieut. Swindler retired in favor of Shiner, who was transferred to the box from shortstop position. Shiner hurled ably in the relief role. He pitched hitless ball for three innings, but began to weaken near the end and was nipped for a run in the seventh and two more in the eighth.

Off the combined offerings of the two opposing pitchers, Central collected only seven hits, but none of them was wasted, and three errors and three bases on balls figured also in the scoring. Central played almost errorless ball afield.

Pitcher Luttrell helped himself to a circuit clout with one league on base to start the four-run assault on Swindler in the third inning. Dalton and LaMar got two hits apiece during the contest.

The triumph was the first registered by Central over the cadets this year, the Home having won the two previous contests.

The Lang Chevrolets will seek to get back on even terms with Anderson's Abattoirs in a National League contest Friday night with Springfield Valley, which was blanked by the city champs on the first round of play.

MAX SCHMELING AND MANAGER DROP FUSS OVER RING VERDICT

Movies Show Sharkey
Superior Fighter
Jacobs Learns

NEW YORK, June 24.—Max Schmeling and his manager, Joe Jacobs, have conceded the world's heavyweight championship to Jack Sharkey.

"We will make no more fuss over the matter because further controversy might hurt boxing in New York state," said the philanthropic Jacobs last night.

"We will make no complaint to the boxing commission, and I don't think anyone else will either. I doubt if it would do any good; we wouldn't get any action. But we still consider the decision unjust."

This concession came after forty-eight hours of bickering, stimulated to some extent by Jacobs' charges over the radio and through the press that Max Schmeling had been "robbed" of his title at the Long Island bowl.

Jacobs' announcement came on the eve of the boxing commission's meeting and after the appearance of newspapers explaining to a distraught public that motion pictures of the battle showed that Sharkey had outlasted Schmeling 5 to 1. The only mistake the judges and referee made, it seemed, was that they had not given Sharkey a wider margin of victory.

Meanwhile, the maligned Gunboat Smith has consulted attorneys over the possibility of slapping a libel suit onto the Schmeling camp.

Jacobs said Schmeling will sail for Germany in three or four days for a vacation. He will fight in September against Larry Gains in London or against Mickey Walker, Primo Carnera or Steve Hamas in New York.

Smile, Depression Graduates! Faces May Be Your Fortunes

Shump Has Hit Erudition, But Fame and Fortune
Await Possessors of Proper Type of Masculine Beauty.

One cannot eat a diploma, nor does the privilege of wearing a couple of letters at the back of one's name help much when shoes begin to turn over at the heels. A great many graduates from colleges and universities will recognize the sad truth of that statement before long. However, there is one field where golden opportunity awaits young men of the proper type. That is the business, or should we say art, of modeling. Take the case of Jack Boyle, a graduate of the 1928 class of Fordham University. Jack wanted to be a doctor, but prosperity skipped him in the middle of his career and he became a job hunter. Apart for his varsity education—which he found useless—Jack's only asset was his manly beauty and of this asset he made such good use that he is today on top of the world. His face looks out millions all over the world from advertisements of a well-known collar manufacturing company and the demand for his services keeps him pretty busy and his bank balance growing. Another young man who capitalized upon his masculine pulchritude is Walter Thornton, whose career as a bricklayer was ended by the depression. Walter's services are so much sought that he has had hundreds of plaster casts made of his perfect head, which he sells to artists and illustrators. Modeling was a stepping stone to movie stardom for Neil Hamilton, the publicity he received via the advertising posters having attracted the attention of Hollywood film moguls. So, graduates, look in the mirror and if you bear any resemblance to Johnny Weissmuller, aquatic and film star, who is regarded as the perfect type, there is a chance that you may overcome the handicap of a college education and be a success—depression regardless.

NEW YORK, June 24—Before the current month comes to an end, many thousands of young men who have just completed a care-free four years in colleges and universities will swell the legion of job-seekers that has already grown to enormous dimensions.

A good many pairs of shoes will be worn out on office door mats and many tender knuckles will be calloused on office doors before a part of the huge army of graduates begins to derive any benefits from their erudition. And a great portion of that army will finally be compelled to accept jobs where a college education is a hindrance rather than an asset.

However, to the young man of ham University, New York, of the 1928 class.

Jack wanted to be a doctor, but when prosperity went into hiding he found it impossible to continue his medical education and was compelled to go job-hunting. A good dancer and a fair athlete, Jack had no other qualifications for a business career—unless good looks can be termed an asset. But, strangely enough, it was his regular modeling features that finally put him on top of the world, for he got into the modeling game and in no time at all had made America "stiff-collared conscious."

Ironically, Jack never wears a stiff collar except when he poses for the ads which look out from newspapers and posters all over the world.

Another young man whose masculine beauty chased the wolf from the door and led him to an oasis of prosperity in the desert of depression is Walter Thornton, whose specialty is modeling hats.

Walter was a bricklayer until the powers that be discovered that the supply of houses was far in excess of the number of tenants. Having been the recipient of many compliments about his good looks, Walter turned his attention to modeling and his success exceeded his fondest hopes.

It seems that though many men have perfectly shaped ears, very few have them placed on at the proper angle. Now that is where Walter comes out on top of the heap, for not only has he the perfect ears but they are attached to his cranium in the manner ideally adapted to the most advantageous display of the male chapeau.

Walter is now in the modeling business in a big way. Having more demand for his services than he could supply, he had hundreds of plaster casts made of his perfect head. These he sold to artists and illustrators, leaving him free to pose for photographic work.

Modeling was a stepping stone to the movies for Neil Hamilton, well known to a million film fans. Neil's versatile career included machinist, hardware clerk, scene shifter, cigar counter and bond salesman, besides modeling, which got him his big chance—the wide publicity given to his manly beauty having resulted in an offer from Hollywood.

So, graduates, if you cannot find an outlet for your college training, maybe you may find one for good looks that pays much better. Look in the mirror and if you think you look anything like Johnny Weissmuller, aquatic and movie star, there's a chance for you in modeling. For Johnny is regarded as the ideal type.

COUNTY CLUB TOUR TO SPRINGFIELD IS ENJOYED BY GROUP

Approximately 400 4-H Club members, parents and leaders attended the annual Greene County Club Tour at Springfield, Wednesday, June 22.

The object was to provide an educational as well as a recreational tour. For the educational feature a trip was made through the Crowell Publishing Co. and the International Harvester Co.

At the Crowell Publishing Co., where the American, Colliers, Country Home, and the Woman's Home Companion are published, the group saw the giant six color printing presses in operation, costing $60,000 to $65,000 each. This plant publishes nine million copies or 250 carloads of magazines monthly which are mailed to every state in the union and practically every civilized country in the world.

At the International Harvester Co. the group saw the various stages in building trucks. Following the trip through the two plants the group visited Snyder Park where a picnic dinner was served. The afternoon was spent with a general good time consisting of boating, swimming and games.

Sweet Odors Kill And Kill Quickly, Every Fly or Mosquito

Science has discovered that a flower grown in Japan repels and kills winged insects. New! The extract of these flowers is employed to completely free your home—and keep it free—from these germ-bearing pests.

That flower extract is the basis of Fly-Tox, developed in Mellon Institute of Industrial Research by Rex Research Fellowship. Ten years and over $100,000 have been spent by us in perfecting it.

The result is a perfumed mist, called Fly-Tox. Used as we direct, it creates in a room a pleasant cloud of vapor. An all-pervading great economy to you. You cannot take chances in protection of your home. Get Fly-Tox at once. Sold everywhere. Harmless to people. Stainless. Made by the Makers of Moth-Tox.

Use Fly-Tox only, and always in the Fly-Tox type Fly-Tox sprayer. Use it because of its marvelous efficiency. Every lot is tested on flies in our laboratory. Use it because its extra strength means

OFFICIAL GREETER MEETS NOTABLES AT CHICAGO STATIONS

CHICAGO, June 24—Chicago has an official greeter who meets notables at trains and escorts them to their hotels. He calls himself Greeter Gaw.

It's quite worth while to ride with Greeter Gaw and a notable. The greeter escorts the notable from the station or the air field to his hotel. He has a big white automobile and is conducted through traffic lights and on the wrong side of street cars by two out-riders—motorcycle policemen on white uniforms. Greeter Gaw wears white.

"Chicago has umpteen miles of paved roads," Greeter Gaw expounds into the ear of the notable "It has umpty-umpty hectares of parks."

The notable listens and pretty soon Greeter Gaw, being well trained in the art of greeting, stops talking about Chicago and lets the notable say something.

"Sorry, sir," he finally interrupts, "but it is necessary for me to tell you at this point that Chicago has more miles of fresh water beach than any city of its size in Illinois" or something like that.

By the time he gets the notable to his hotel, Greeter Gaw has told him about all there is to know on the credit side of Chicago's ledger. He has taken him by the most attractive route, through parks and past the finest homes.

Before parting with his notable, Greeter Gaw, in a nice way of course, suggests that it would be appreciated if the notable says a kind word for Chicago when he meets the newspapermen.

CASE BEING TRIED HERE SECOND TIME

Second jury trial of a $1,000 damage action brought by Howard O. Glass and A. C. Glass against Arthur Bahns and Gladys R. Bahns was in progress Friday before Judge R. L. Gowdy in Common Pleas Court. Taking testimony was begun after a jury was selected during the morning session.

A verdict for $1,034.32 awarded Howard and A. C. Glass by a jury October 27, 1931, was set aside by the Court of Appeals in a decision handed down last May 6, and the case was remanded for retrial. The amount for which the plaintiffs ask judgment is claimed to be the balance due on the purchase price of a farm involved in a contract sale.

JAMES P. ORR DIES ON FISHING TRIP

Orr, a native of Clarion County, Pa., was active in the city manager movement here, twice was chairman of the community chest and had served as president of the National Shoe Retailers Association.

A Wee Bit Homesick?

There's nothing quite so lonesome as a Sunday away from home. While the family is attending the home church tomorrow, won't you come to one of our houses of worship? This simultaneous tuning in on God will help you enjoy together Sunday's universal program of worship.

Tuning in to God

THE radio is not only wonderful in itself, it is equally wonderful in its suggestiveness. It makes us think of the possibilities of communication with God, especially of the secret of it. Though the privilege of hearing God's voice is universal, only those can experience it who meet the condition. And that condition is "tuning in" to God, assuming a constant attitude of faith in and obedience to Him. Would you hear God speak to your soul? Then turn to Him a willing mind and heart and life.

ROBBING GRAVES OF FLOWERS IS RACKET

CHICAGO, June 24.—A new and ghouliah racket was disclosed today by police after investigation of the gun battle fought over the grave of George (Red) Barker, himself a slain racketeer.

Officers said organized gangs were invading cemeteries and stripping newly made graves of floral pieces in order to sell the wire frames to florists.

It was disclosed that the men who were driven from Barker's grave by a caretaker would have been unable to steal the gangster's coffin as it is enclosed in a cement vault.

Good Gardening

EVENING PERFUME

BY DEAN HALLIDAY

Garden Expert for Central Press and The Gazette

"I like to walk in my garden in the evening," said my neighbor, "and smell the fragrance of the flowers. Is there any flower that is especially noted for its evening perfume?"

"There is a flower that was once a great favorite," I replied, "but it is not grown very much now, despite the fact that it gives off a delightful perfume in the evening."

This flower, noted for its evening perfume, is the double rocket, called by horticulturalists, hesperis matronalis. Its fragrant spikes of white and purple flowers once made it a great favorite of gardeners, although now it is not grown as much as it deserves to be.

The neglect of this fragrant flower may be due to the peculiarity that, although hardy, it depends for its perpetuation on being taken up every second year and replanted in a fresh spot. If this is not done, the plant invariably dies, and the plant dwindles away.

Even when this plant is transplanted it is wise not to rely upon the transplanting mainly, but to propagate fresh plants in early autumn, wintering them in a cold frame, either in pots or in a bed of sandy soil.

The perennial forms of double rocket grow about two feet in height and bloom from mid-May to July. They make good plants for the middle row of a hardy plant border. When planted out they should be given a rich soil, in which old manure and sand have been incorporated. They love a sunny place, but like moisture at the roots in the form of humus.

THE Sacred Eye By BRUCE E. GRIGGS

A Story of Mystery and Love in The South Seas

CHAPTER 44

PAUL HESITATED momentarily, for he seemed to feel the magnitude of the thing. Here in her hand, in those pages, she at last held the secret. Her face was pale. We felt it, but the force of the thing could not strike home with us as it did with her, for it had not been a part of our very lives since we drew our first breath.

Quietly then, she began to read: September 24th, Inst., 1936. To Faith Whitney.

Dear Sister—

We have come through of yesterday a very harrowing experience, and are now in possession of a pearl the value of which is tremendous.

Because this secret must not fall into strange hands I am guarding it by a double code known only to seafaring men of education and ship's officers. Even they must be in possession of the code word.

If it reaches you by the grace of heaven, the code word and your instructions will also come, but separately.

Captain Noah Barrows, whom I trust completely, will decipher this for you and help you in every way possible. If we never meet again it will tell you of my fate.

This, my log book, will be taken on to the trade route by my mate, Ansel Van Syke, and by his hand dispatched to you by ship. Another package will contain your instructions, which you will have already received before you read this code.

We did yesterday, by concerted action, storm a heathen temple high in a peak of this island, and after a fierce fight, subdue the savages and carry away as prize a huge black pearl, of the size of my glass eye, in place of which I am now wearing it in my head for safe keeping.

This jewel, the fame of which is known throughout this island world is of very great worth and is a fierce quest find ever made in these waters, which are famous for their pearls. So rare was it that it was a part of the adornment of the principal idol of these heathen.

In this fierce battle, half of my loyal crew were slain, and we had just regained the ship and raised anchor to set sail when we were fallen on by a fleet of warlike savages in great canoes. Numbers were against us.

The savages succeeded in scuttling the ship from the stern, where we could not get at them to drive them off, forcing us to abandon ship. We were unable to take with us the fortune in pearls into which the cargo had been converted by trade with the heathen, and the wreck of the ship's strongbox, which contained the pearl, lay in the water. The wreck of the Western Waves lies on the bottom of the lagoon, in from three to four fathoms of water about 200 feet off shore, just off the first rocky point of the cove between the high peaks of this island.

By the grace of God, my son, Peter, still lives, as do Ansel Van Syke and myself, albeit, I am badly wounded in my left side from a well placed thrust by one of the heathen savages. However, I believe I shall recover. Ansel said that while spying on the savages this morning, he saw them take him off in a canoe, and I am sure he will be found with my body. Because of the added safety of the secret higher chamber, it is there that I shall sleep, and if I die there my body will be found.

The entrances and exits to all of these secret passages are most ingeniously concealed. To locate the one which leads to the higher chamber, look in the temple for a Silence fell as Paul's voice died. There in that phraseology of a dead generation, there had been painted for us a picture of stark drama. Through other eyes we had witnessed the scenes of a hundred years ago there on grim old Taree.

THE GOOD OLD DAYS

If I remember rightly, anyone a cheer could raise.

By speaking with affection of the vanished good old days.

In the times when we'd turned lavish ere the market fell so low.

We boasted rather proudly of the joys we used to know, and we talked our boyhood over, and we wondered if again we'd ever know the gladness and the thrill of 'way back then.

Those were days when boys sold papers and ran errands for a dime.

When a dollar was a fortune and to waste one seemed a crime; Those were days we worked all summer for a bicycle or gun. But all that we remembered of our hardships was the fun.

We had come to linen collars, motor cars, and foolish ways, And seemed anxious that our children shouldn't know those "good old days."

Now we're walling in our anguish that the good old days are gone.

There are mighty tasks before us and some mightier following on.

Now our boys are running errands for their nickles and their dimes.

And a dollar seems important in these strange, eventful times. Hearts and minds by care are sobered, though the pain has been severe.

For our children, let's remember, that those "good old days" are here.

FORECLOSURE SUIT ON MORTGAGE FILED

Suit for $3,324.67 and foreclosure of mortgaged real estate in New Jasper Twp. has been filed in Common Pleas Court by the Peoples Building and Savings Co. against T. C. Long, former Xenia real estate broker, Viola Long and Martha Fudge, with Nellie R. Adams, William E. Watson, Stella W. Fudge, J. B. Ruffner, Vernon F. Cross, William E. Rachford, Felicia Rachford and Ruth H. Kirkpatrick named co-defendants.

A contract made the basis of the action was entered into August 27, 1923. Some of the co-defendants, who are successors in title to the real estate assumed the mortgage indebtedness, and others claim an interest in the property. The petition recites C. W. Whitmer is the plaintiff's attorney.

No Fan Says Zasu Pitts Never Goes She Admits

Zasu Pitts, film comedienne, whose technique resembles more that of a tragedian, admitted on a witness stand in Los Angeles the other day that she never attends motion pictures "not even my own."

Miss Pitts was a witness in the $1,000,000 libel suit brought by Mrs. Teresa Rubens, mother of the late Alma Rubens, against James R. Quirk, publisher of Photoplay Magazine. Ricardo Cortez, husband of the late Miss Rubens, has also testified in the case.

Miss Pitts was asked if she could name any motion picture in which Miss Rubens appeared that might have brought her the rank of stardom. She was unable to answer because she said she never went to the movies. She evidently does not to get in and he and his mother stood in the covered bleachers, so to speak, and watched Henry McRae make a Universal serial. McRae is still making them, his current work being "The Jungle Mystery" by Talbot Mundy. Today Bellamy will have completed his role in "Airmail" under direction of John Ford who began his picture career on that same date that same year. How's that for coincidence!

hold with the mail carrier who takes walks on his vacation or the sailor who goes for a boat ride. Yet it would seem that the movie player who watches himself on the screen would find this a means of correcting his mistakes and improving his technique.

The dramatic march of the bonus army to Washington already is on its way to the screen.

Two Paramount writers, Malcolm Boylan and Harvey Gates, have been assigned to rush through a story to be filmed under the title of "Washington, Here We Are".

Aside from scoring a journalistic scoop on the other studios, Paramount has a sure-fire box-office idea of writing in a couple of Flagg and Quirk characters for Edmund Lowe and Victor McLaglen. As both these actors are playing on the lot in another, "Riddle Me This", Sam Katz merely will have to get their names on a contract.

Sinclair Lewis the novelist, has written to Hollywood friends that he couldn't be hired to go there. He plans to sail for Europe August 24. Lewis' new feminist novel, "Ann Vickers", will come out serially in the January issue of a national magazine and the film moguls are already fluttering over it.

Just seventeen years ago Friday, Ralph Bellamy, the present film star, made his first visit to Universal City. It had been opened only two months and was being boosted by the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce as one of the sights of the city. It cost twenty-five cents

Discoverer of North Pole to be Honored in Arctic

"Snow-Baby" Daughter of Admiral Peary With Expedition That Will Erect Memorial to Famous Father in White Wilderness Where She Was Born.

When the schooner Effie M. Morrissey, recently sailed from New York for the bleak coast of Greenland, she carried, in addition to a number of scientists and masons, Mrs. Marie Ahnighito Peary Stafford, daughter of the late Admiral Robert Peary, discoverer of the North Pole, and her two sons, Peary, 14, and Edward, 12. The object of the expedition is the erection of a memorial to the great explorer at Cape York, 600 miles within the Arctic Circle. It will consist of a stone shaft 60 feet in height, surmounted by a rust-proof metal cap which will reflect the brilliance of the Arctic sun. On its base will be an engraved memorial tablet. When completed the monument will be unveiled by Mrs. Stafford. To the daughter of the famous Admiral the trip is also in the nature of a visit to her birthplace, for she was born during one of Peary's expeditions to the north and for that reason was known as the "Snow-Baby." Captain Robert Bartlett, who accompanied Peary on many of his ventures is skipper of the expedition. When the Admiral planted the Stars and Stripes at the top of the world in 1909 it was Captain Bob who sailed him north. Among those who waved a bon voyage to the Effie M. Morrissey was Mrs. Robert Peary, widow of the explorer, and many of Peary's old comrades. According to Captain Bartlett, the monument will take about two months to build and he expects to be back in New York in October.

NEW YORK, June 24—One of the strangest expeditions ever to leave these shores sailed recently aboard the schooner Effie M. Morrissey, headed for bleak Cape York, 600 miles within the Arctic Circle, under the command of Captain Robert Bartlett, veteran of the ice floes. Besides a crew of twenty-seven, the ship carries a number of scientists, a gang of masons, who will erect a 60-foot memorial to Admiral Robert Peary, discoverer of the North Pole, at Cape York, and last, but not least, Mrs. Marie Ahnighito Stafford, of Washington, D. C., daughter of the Admiral. To Mrs. Stafford the expedition is not only a tribute to her distinguished father, but is also a visit to the land of her birth, for she was born in the Arctic during one of Admiral Peary's many expeditions to the vicinity of the pole. And by reason of her first seeing the light of day in the great white wilderness, was picturesquely called the "Snow-Baby." Accompanying their mother to the land of her birth are Mrs. Stafford's two sons, Peary, 14, and Edward, 12. The latter will have the distinction of being the youngest white boy to penetrate 600 miles within the Circle. The memorial monument to Admiral Peary will be erected on a high plateau overlooking Cape York from an eminence of 1,600 feet and will be visible in clear weather from all seaward points. At the summit of the stone shaft will be a rust-proof metal cap that will reflect the brilliance of the Arctic sun and on the base will be an engraved memorial tablet. It will be unveiled by Mrs. Stafford. Captain Bartlett estimated that the monument will take about two months to build—with the anticipated assistance of about 400 Eskimos—which means that the expedition ought to be back in New York next October. However, a lot depends on ice conditions. The weather-beaten skipper is no stranger to northern latitudes. In 1909, when Peary planted the Stars and Stripes on top of the world, it was Captain Bob who sailed his ship up north. He was a seasoned sailorman then, enthusiastic for any new adventure that came his way. Today, he is every bit as active and has lost none of his enthusiasm.

While the monument is in process of erection, the scientists of the expedition, under the leadership of Arthur D. Norcross, will set out from Cape York in a twenty-five foot whaleboat in an attempt to reach 80 degrees north in search of scientific data, as well as flora and fauna for the Smithsonian Institute.

The masts of the Effie M. Morrissey bore a festive appearance as she sailed out of New York harbor. The flag of the Society of Women Geographers; replicas of the flags that Admiral Peary carried north in the Roosevelt in 1909; the banner of Bowdoin College, the explorer's Alma Mater; the pennant of Kappa Epsilon fraternity, similar to the one Peary planted at the Pole with the American flag, and the standard of the Explorer's Club all fluttered gayly from the schooner as she set out on the adventurous voyage. Incidentally, it was the Explorer's Club that helped raise the funds for the Peary Memorial Expedition.

Mrs. Robert Peary, the Admiral's widow, was on hand to see the start of the venture as were several of Peary's old comrades, who had been with him on many of his Arctic explorations.

LOCKLAND FIRM TO FURNISH CITY TAR

The L. P. Cavett Co., Lockland, O., submitting a bid of $2,150, was awarded the contract Thursday night by City Commission for furnishing 20,000 gallons of tar to be applied to the surface of city streets embraced by the extensive street repair program this summer. The Lockland firm submitted a price of 10 1/2 cents a gallon for 10,000 gallons of cold tar and 10,000 gallons of hot tar. One other bid was considered. The contract specifies that the firm shall sweep the streets and that it shall also apply the tar.

City officials say that two or three streets are already in readiness for tar applications.

The commission transacted other routine business at its bi-monthly meeting.

ANTIOCH TO CONFER DEGREES ON 64 SENIORS SATURDAY MORNING

Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver of the Temple, Cleveland, will deliver the address to sixty-four graduates of Antioch College at the seventy-sixth annual commencement Saturday morning at 10 o'clock. The exercises will be held out of doors, weather permitting.

Rabbi Silver has been a leader in educational circles for a number of years, and is prominently known as a writer and lecturer. He is vice-president of the Consumers' League of Ohio.

Conforming with a long-standing custom, the academic procession will leave the college library at 10 a. m., and proceed across the campus to "the mound," on which the speaker will stand, and around which the commencement guests, faculty and students will be seated.

The professional will be played by the college orchestra, and a special string quartet will offer a selection.

Nine students, it is announced, will be awarded degrees with the highest honors offered by the college for superior work throughout the college course and in their major fields. Eleven more are to be graduated with distinction in the fields in which they majored.

Following the commencement address, degrees will be conferred upon the graduates by President Arthur E. Morgan.

The commencement luncheon will be served on the campus, at the conclusion of the exercises, by members of the college dining room staff.

Social activities which annually characterize the closing week of school at Antioch, began with the "Junior prom" Thursday evening in the two large gymnasiums of the physical education building. Friday afternoon, at 4 o'clock,

President and Mrs. Morgan will hold a reception at their home for graduates and their friends, and at 6:30 o'clock the annual alumni dinner will be held in the college dining room. Diverging from a custom of the past few years when groups of one-act plays have been selected for the commencement offering, the Antioch Players this year are presenting Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream." Unless the weather prevents, the performance will be out of doors at 9 p. m. Friday on the east steps of Antioch Hall, the main building. A cast of more than twenty-five, including most of the more-experienced student actors and actresses on the campus, will be used in the production, and the college orchestra and glee clubs will provide music.
